LAWSON AND THE CUP

The recent death of that one-time multi-millionaire Thomas W. Lawson recalls a man who in his palmy days presented one of the picturesque figures in the world of finance of that period. Older readers will remember something of the sensational part he played in battles with other noted financiers of his time and how through recurrent periods he figured in the boldest of type upon the front pages of the daily press. At other times his full page advertisements in the papers of the country set the people into excitement over some pet stock that he was for the moment manipulating—usually to the profit of its manipulator, whose bank accounts were reported as running into fabulous figures. And he died penniless. Among Lawson's many striking performances was the building in 1901 of the yacht Independence, with the purpose of entering her in the race of that year for the defence of the America's cup; but he was not permitted to put her into the race, for the technical reason, so it was given out, that he was not a member of the yacht club which had served as the custodian of the cup. Enraged at this ruling Lawson destroyed the Independence, upon which he had expended $200,000.

The country rang with the controversy. Lawson issued a book about it, "The Lawson History of the America's Cup," the writing of which he entrusted to a brilliant young newspaper man (a Maine boy), Winfield M. Thompson, who for a period lived in Rockland as editor of the Free Press. It is a wonderful example of book making, in format royal octavo, sumptuously printed and characteristically bound in white canvases, the covers richly embellished with gold. There are a multitude of illustrations, with each of the famous American contesting yachts done handsomely in colors. The book relates anew that always fascinating story of the succeeding attempts put forth by English yachtsmen for recovery of the famous cup following the time it was "lifted" out of Great Britain on that memorable Oct. 22, 1851, attempts which to the present time have proved unsuccessful. The Lawson book describes these contests for the cup down to the year of the Boston financier's supposed engagement with it, the details of which piece of controversy are presented at much length, which was of course Lawson's chief purpose in issuing the book. He sent a copy of it to the editor of this paper and we have just been renewing the pleasure of turning over its superb pages. As a piece of book artistry it is a joyous thing to look upon and its production must have cost what the average man would regard as a fortune.

Interest in these cup contests has never failed to reach boiling point both in this country and England. With them in recent years has become inseparably associated the name of Sir Thomas Lipton, who four times in succession has built and sailed a Shamrock to four successive defeats, pursuing his attempts and hearing their defeat with a spirit and courtesy that have written his name imperishably on the scroll of true sportsmanship. As often as the story of the cup is told, is related the good old tale of the famous dialogue of Queen Victoria with her signal-master. The Queen with the Prince of Wales was following the race from the deck of the royal steam yacht, the Victoria and Albert. The signal-master, peering from the deck down the Solent, was asked by Her Majesty:

"Say, signal-master, are the yachts in sight?"

"Yes, may it please Your Majesty."

"Which is first?"

"The America."

"Which is second?"

"Ah, Your Majesty, there is no second."

When the topic of yachting is under discussion, as it sometimes is, one inclines to wish that the sport had not so completely withdrawn itself from local waters. There have been times in the past when Rockland harbor was whitened with the sails of small racing craft whose owners developed a keen rivalry and the sailing of contests became matters of intense community interest. Perhaps the development of winter sports may serve to bring back into notice the possibilities that lie in the water side of our city for sport in summer time.

When the carrier boy fails to deliver your paper telephone the office. The oversight will be promptly corrected.

WORKING FOR BRIDGE

Forces At Augusta Are Not Idle, Reports Representative Thompson.

Representative Rodney I. Thompson, who was home from Augusta over Sunday, brings word that the Kennebec Bridge forces are bending every effort for the success of the measure, and that the Knox and Lincoln delegations are working systematically on the proposition, with meetings being held at frequent intervals.

"Much depends," said Mr. Thompson, "upon the report which will be made by the engineering experts now working at Bath. That it will be a toll bridge is a foregone conclusion, and nobody is talking anything else seriously. Aroostook County was reported to be solidly against the bridge proposition, but when this rumor was investigated it proved to be groundless."

Representative Thompson finds that he is not alone in opposing compulsory automobile insurance. "It means simply a license to kill," said he, quoting with approval the words of another representative. "It gives a license to anyone who is not a good driver to kill."

"Things are going along nicely," said Representative Thompson, "and the legislature is doing its best for the corresponding period two years ago."

POLITICAL ASPIRATIONS

Burleigh Martin Candidate For Speaker—Owen For State Treasurer.

Representative Burleigh Martin of Augusta will be a candidate for a re-election to the House in 1925 and at the session of 1927 will be a candidate for speaker. Representative Martin, who has been mayor of Augusta since 1917, has been serving his second term in the House and those who have watched his career believe that he ought to return once more to this branch of the legislature and that he is the best man to lead it.

Hon. William S. Owen of Milo, member of the retiring Governor's council, has formally announced that he would be a candidate for State Treasurer two years from now, when Treasurer Bonney's term expires. Mr. Owen has canvassed the situation to some extent and has received promises of support from members of the Legislature representing all sections of Maine. So far he is the only candidate for the position.

Mr. Owen has served in both branches of the State Legislature as well as one term on the executive council and he is intimately familiar with the business affairs of the State. He is engaged in business in Milo and is vice president of the Kinross Trust Company of Dover-Foxcroft, which has a branch in Milo.

TOO HOT TO HUNT

Down In St. Petersburg They Welcomed a Thunder Shower To Cool Off.

Fruitland Park, Fla., Feb. 10

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

It was 80 in the shade here today, but a thunder shower cooled it off.

We have had a very fine winter so far. The orange trees are in bloom, and the mocking birds are beginning to sing, so spring is here.

Dr. Alden went hunting today and it was so hot that his dog fainted away. He had to give it up and come home, but the family will have quail for dinner tomorrow. One of my neighbors caught a black bass that weighed 13 pounds. Some bass that we are going to Tampa and St. Petersburg to look up friends there. All of our party are well and commencing to talk of hitting the northward trail. Miss Jennie Blacking-ton and Miss Nettie Clark leave Aug. 5 on the Steamship City of Savannah. The others go later.

I expect to see some real baseball soon as there are several big league teams near here and they will all play games while training.

ROCKLAND HIGH GIRLS

IN SPORTING CIRCLES

The big event in basketball circles this week is the game between Rockport High and Thomaston High, which will take place in the Rockport Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night.

Smarting under last Wednesday night's defeat on the home surface, Thomaston High is making the invasion with a revengeful spirit, determined to halt Rockport's mad pennant dash, and reestablish itself in the regard of its followers. Rockport High is not worrying about either of its games this week, being reasonably confident that it will repeat with Thomaston, and morally certain that the game with Lincoln Academy Friday night will mean another notch in its string of victories. This game also will be played in Rockport.

Spear of Bath, who refereed the Rockland-Camden game, Friday night, is much in demand as a Central Board official and already has bookings nearly up to the season's close.

Too bad the Rockland-Rockport game of March 4 could not be played at Oakland Park. That's about the only place large enough to accommodate all who will want to see it.

Maine bowlers are in fine fettle this winter. In a 10-string match in Waterville last Friday Forrest Knight of Westbrook chalked up a total of 1142, his lowest string being 104 and his highest 137. Why not match him with Mr. Valley of 167 game?

William E. O'Connell, one of the best known athletes, coaches and officials in Maine collegiate and scholastic sport is to be transferred from Portland to Boston by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. He reports in Boston March 2 to take up new duties with the company who he has been with the past 14 years. His career in the realm of sports commenced when he was in High School and he became an outstanding star and authority on football, basketball and track.

The Jordan High School hockey team of Lewiston, coached by "Pat" French, the famous Maine athlete, will play Rockland High on Stevens field next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This event is under the auspices of the Winter Sports Committee, and if the conditions are favorable will call out a big crowd.

Rockport High was not obliged to extend itself Friday night in the game with Boothbay Harbor High, and the latter's scalp was added to its string by a 34 to 12 score. Substitutes Crone and Spear were in the game a considerable portion of the time, and both gave a good account of themselves. The score:

Rockland High plays Lincoln Academy in Newcastle tomorrow night, and will make a strong bid for the game, owing to its ambitions in the pennant race. The Rockland Midgets will be seen in the preliminary game. Volunteers with automobiles are asked to notify Coach Jones.

AT THE STATE CAPITOL

Many Important Hearings Scheduled For This Week—Knox and Lincoln Measures Pending.

Augusta, Maine, Feb. 16.—Last hour rushes to get bills of special and private legislation in before the close of reception, created a hectic session last week. The "boom Maine" program is being echoed in the various committee hearings and finds strongest evidence in the hearings before the committee on Ways and Bridges. Boosting Maine by first improving the roads appeared to be a strong point stressed by all.

The sum of $2,000 is asked for a road in Southport and Sebecmag. Love from that town, also Mr. Brooks, summer hotel proprietor of that town, appeared and boosted Maine's roads in asking for that amount to be used for repair of the road leading to Southport beach. The same men also spoke for the measure to give $5,000 to Southport and Boothbay Harbor for construction of a bridge to the bridge between Boothbay Harbor and Southport, the two towns each to give $1250 for the same.

A hearing will be held Tuesday, before the committee on Salaries and Fees relative to the act to increase the salary of the county attorney of Knox county. The same committee that day will also hear the resolve relative to an act to compensate the clerk of courts for Lincoln county. The salary of the register of deeds of Lincoln county and of clerk hire in the office of the same will also occupy a hearing that day. Increase of salary of the Knox register of deeds and for clerk hire in the same office will add to Knox and Lincoln hearings that day.

The resolve appropriating money to aid in the construction of a road in the town of Union will have a hearing before the committee on Ways and Bridges, at 2 o'clock Tuesday. Washington town road aid will be included in a hearing at the same time.

The limit for admission of bills for special and private legislation in this week is the game between Rockport High and Thomaston High, which will take place in the Rockport Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night.

Smarting under last Wednesday night's defeat on the home surface, Thomaston High is making the invasion with a revengeful spirit, determined to halt Rockport's mad pennant dash, and reestablish itself in the regard of its followers. Miss Hazel Williams, who has been in charge of the Brookside Lunch in the old Courier-Gazette building, has transferred that establishment to William E. Sholes, who has already taken charge. Baby entries for Community Fair baby show are coming in with pleasing promptness and frequency. Not only is the local field covered, but representatives are in line from neighboring towns as well.

Thousands of dollars are being spent in remodeling both the interior and exterior of the New DeWitt Hotel in Lewiston. This establishment is owned by the Franklin Company and operated by Mrs. M. H. Pattee, formerly of this city.

Berlin, N. H., is the latest city to add a Rotary Club to the 8th Rotarian District of which Rockland is a member. Among the club's 22 charter members is Maynard H. Morse, a Berlin lawyer, whose name appears in the list of officers as secretary. Mrs. Morse is a Rockland girl—Miss Helen Webb.

The Turner Center System, which held its annual meeting in Auburn last Friday, did a gross business of $617,138 last year. Dividends to the amount of $177,997 were paid, leaving a net surplus earning of $59,564. Robert Haskell of Auburn was elected president of the company. H. L. Grinnell of Union was among the directors elected.

Among those who came to see the model of the Frederick Billings, which has been on exhibition at The Courier-Gazette office for a few days, was Capt. Charles R. Magee of the customs office. "There's some work in that model," quoth he, "and Mr. Hatch has certainly given lots of attention to detail. I suppose I could make one of those models, but I should want $1,000 for it."

The local Masonic fraternity was filled with sorrow Saturday upon learning of the death of Wilmer J. Dorman of Belfast. He was a past commander of the Grand Commandery of Maine Knights Templar, a past high priest of the Grand Chapter and past trustee of the Grand Lodge of the Grand Council. He was a 33rd degree Mason taking his first degrees in Phoenix Lodge in Belfast in 1902.

A telegram received late yesterday afternoon brought the information that the Spillman lecture, scheduled for tomorrow night in the Baptist church, had been of necessity cancelled, through the impossibility of Mr. Spillman to keep his engagement in this city. The lecture was to have been the concluding number in the lecture course put on by the B. & P. W. Club for the benefit of the High School Equipment Fund.

Four grocery stores on Main street and one on Park are sporting very pretty window displays installed by Charlie Swinn of Rockland, who is the Maine representative for the Campbell Soup Co. Charlie did fine work with the red and white crepe paper that blends with the labels on the cans. He left town this morning for Augusta but says he will be back later with something new for the Rockland trade in the way of a window.

Sunday saw the Methodist auditorium crowded to welcome Rev. M. E. Osborne, a former pastor. Mr. Osborne who has been engaged in the missionary field, had much of interest to tell his audience about that vital part of the work. While at the local church his fine singing voice was a constant attraction, and he soon demonstrated that he had lost none of his skill. He took occasion to compliment the parish on its present thriving condition and to say words of praise for the present pastor.

The retirement of Chief Justice Leslie C. Cornish which may take place any time prior to Oct. 8, will leave a vacancy on the Supreme Bench, and there is much speculation as to who will fill it. Among the names most prominently mentioned are those of George L. Emery, the present chairman of the Republican State Committee; and Hon. Frank G. Harrington of Augusta, who was a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination last June. The terms of Associate Justices John A. Morrill and Lure B. Deasy also expire this year, but both will probably be reappointed.

Speaking about the weather—Feb. 26 will be a dog day, very much of a dog day according to the present outlook. Roy L. Knowlton, chairman of the Dog Show committee of Community Fair, already has a long list of entries and is anxious to complete it at once. If you have a dog you feel should enter the show be sure and notify Mr. Knowlton at Cobb's Inc., by Tuesday of next week, that adequate provision may be made. Through the courtesy of Chief Havener and Capt. Hodgdon Central Fire Station will be available to those who do not care to take their prize contenders into the crowded Arcade before the show hour, 3 o'clock. This should eliminate much of the restlessness felt by the dogs while waiting for inspection and judging. Dogs and attendants will be admitted by the rear door upon knocking, as an officer will be constantly on duty there.

The company is coming—so something to eat.

That's a problem not hard to beat: The answer is easy, at Young's you can buy.

ROCKLAND, MAINE

The Chamber of Commerce dinner and open forum will be held in the Thorndike Grill Friday night at 6:30 with D. T. Hersey, advertising manager of Ford Motors, as speaker. Tickets may be obtained from F. L. Linekin, W. C. Ladd, Elmer Joyce, J. W. Robinson, J. E. Sullivan, H. F. Mann, G. B. Orcutt and C. B. Emery.

"Did you know that the wild geese were only gone South two months this winter?" asked O. H. Tripp this morning. "Usually they go South in November (sometimes October) and do not return until early March. This winter they did not migrate until December, and began their northward flight more than a week ago."

Dr. H. L. Stevens has taken over the local branch of the Maine Farm Agency with an office at his Lime-rock street home, telephone 191. The doctor is thoroughly familiar with the territory and is particularly interested in summer home property for which he reports an unprecedented demand, due, he feels, to the Brewster publicity campaign.

Friday night will be devoted to the girls at the Arcade, a sort of "Girls' Basketball Night," with the famous Maine School of Commerce sextette from Auburn contesting with the orange and black. The series between these teams has been highly interesting. Rockland won in Auburn last year by a 2-point margin. A preliminary game will be played between the High School Freshmen and Sophomore boys.

William H. Rhodes has a broad smile on most of the time of late and the cause of the joy sign is found in the type of letter which daily greets him as ticket treasurer of Community Fair. Those letters which enclose unused tickets and there are not a great many) almost invariably bear a word of explanation and regret. The check-bearing missives contain, too, a word of well wishing and very frequently express their good will as did three yesterday, enclosing excess checks—Miss Jane Fales of Pitts-bury for $10, Mrs. Alice Webb Wright of Brookline $5.00, and Miss Rose Pillsbury of Camden for like amount.

Paul Draper, 38, concert singer and grandchild of Charles A. Dana, died Sunday of heart disease, at the New York home of his sister, Miss Ruth Draper monologist. Mr. Draper was prominent in both social and musical circles. He was one of six children of the marriage of Dr. William H. Draper and Miss Ruth Dana. He had appeared as soloist with some of the leading symphony orchestras. On occasions he has appeared on the same platform with his sister, whose talents have been recognized by critics throughout Europe and America. Mr. Draper was heard in Rockland last July in a recital given at the Congregational church where his abilities as an entertaining singer were enjoyed by a good-sized audience.

PRISON REFORMING

Not Money Compensation But Discipline Is What Criminals Most Need.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

In your Saturday issue an article credits Prison Commissioner Hinchborn with the statement that denying prisoners money compensation is like taking milk from a baby. I regard a person who makes such a statement, placing the needs of a helpless innocent baby on a level with the fancied needs of a bunch of criminals, as not fitted for the position of a prison commissioner.

If Maine wants to breed lawbreakers it will be wise to keep such men on the prison commission. If we are going to abolish penalizing criminals, as our prison reformers tell us we should do, why not repeal all of our criminal laws? Why not discontinue our criminal courts and save the cost that they incur? Why not take our law breakers direct to prison? Then after a few months or years (as our reformers deem best) of recreation and amusement, mingled with a little work, and after they have had the gentle guidance and training of our prison reformers, why not give them their liberty?

The United States leads the world in crime—in burglaries, hold-ups and murders. This is the statement of statisticians and the reluctant confession of our criminologists. The statisticians of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. has compiled the homicide records of leading nations over a recent ten-year period. I submit a few of his figures in terms of annual homicides per 100,000:

United States, 7.2; Italy, 3.6; Australia, 1.9; South Africa, 1.8; Spain, 0.9; England, 0.8. In 1923 we had over 11,000 murders, or 10.2 per 100,000, an increase of 40 per cent over the ten-year period.

There is food for thought in the fact that Italy, whose people are noted for their quick temper, has a murder rate 50 per cent as high as ours. England is noted for its quick and rigid enforcement of criminal laws, and it has 11 per cent of our murder rate. Do these statistics show that our boasted prison reform is suppressing or increasing crime?

Prison reform has been in vogue in most of the States for 25 years or more, and its staunchest supporters must admit that statistics prove it a flat failure in suppressing crime. Mr. Hinchborn is quoted in the article referred to as saying that out of every 100 men discharged from prison in this country 375 are recommittees. I believe we need a more practical and rigid enforcement of our laws, and that sentimentality should be sparingly used in prison discipline. The criminally inclined must be taught to respect the law. Fear of the law is the best teacher.

Mr. Jardine, who is a member of the President's agricultural conference, was chosen from the original list of nearly 200 names. Mother Had to Wait for "Engagement Ring"

I married a young man not greatly blessed with worldly goods, says a writer in the Washington Star. He taxed his financial resources to the uttermost to start even our modest housekeeping, so our engagement was not sealed with the customary ring, although I did have a small wedding ring.

During our early married life we had to work and plan to make just a poor living for our three little girls, for although John's salary increased, so did living expenses, and luxuries were unknown.

Soon after our eldest daughter became engaged, John made quite a sum of money on a business deal. One evening he came home with an expensive looking ring box, and opening it, showed us a beautiful diamond ring. We all supposed it to be an engagement present for daughter. She looked complacent, while the younger girls were frankly envious.

My heart fluttered when John interrupted with: "Here, wait a minute. That's mother's engagement ring. Goodness knows she's waited long enough for it, but now's the first time I've been able to afford the kind she deserves."

Ancient Pleasure Spot

At Scarborough, known throughout Great Britain as the "Queen of Watering Places," after 200 years of service, the once popular mineral springs have been closed. Scarborough has long been a place of recreation. The mineral springs are said to have been discovered in 1620, and, towards the end of the century the place was becoming fashionable, and a building was erected over the springs. Then came the earthquake, following which the springs were lost for some years, but they were found again, and the place was a great resort of fashion in the eighteenth century. In 1777, for instance, Sheridan could take Lord Foppington and the rest on a trip to Scarborough, to taste the "noise and folly of the place."

Ancient Life on Everest

Animal life, it appears, is to be found on high mountains far beyond plant growth. The highest growing plant that the Mount Everest expedition of 1924 observed was the blue vetch, at 18,000 feet, but animals live at as great a height as 22,000 feet. "A minute and inconspicuous black spider," says a member of the expedition, "hops about on rocky cliffs and hides beneath stones in those bare places that happen to be swept clear of snow by the wind. I cannot think on what it lives at such a height. In these altitudes there is no other living thing—nothing but rock and ice." This little spider is worthy of note as being the highest permanent inhabitant of the earth.

Soy Bean Excellent Food

Food specialists after traveling through the Old world report they find that millions of people in China, Japan and other countries in Asia depend on the soy bean for food and find it contains many of the qualities found in meat, men being able to work hard, even in the heaviest of toil, when supplied with plenty of soy bean bread or mush, or the various forms in which it is served when cooked as a vegetable.

But in many places the people use it as meat and make bread or cakes from it that are as dependable and important as corn cakes for food, and they can prepare it so it resembles cheese when it is mixed with sour milk and finished for food.

KITCHEN CUPBOARD

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Seasonable Good Things

CANNED peaches and pears make a dainty dessert which one may quickly serve in times of emergency. A spoonful of whipped cream placed on half of a peach or pear, sprinkled with nuts or not, as one wishes.

Attractive Jelly.—One cupful of sifted banana, juice of one-half of a lemon, one-half cupful of orange juice, one-half cupful of sugar, two tablespoonsful of gelatin, one-third cupful of cold water and one cupful of cream. Soak the gelatin in cold water, heat the bananas and sugar in a double boiler, add gelatin; when almost cool add the fruit juice, then cream. Pour into a pan large enough for it to make a layer about one-half inch thick. Add one pound of cranberries, one pound of sugar and enough water to start the cooking. Put through a colander, add two tablespoonsful of soaked gelatin and put a layer of this on top of the bananas and cream. When well set cut into heart-shaped pieces to serve.

Halibut Steaks.—Have two steaks cut about an inch thick. Mix a cupful of fine bread crumbs from the center of the loaf, with one-third of a cupful of melted butter, a dash of paprika, a teaspoonful of salt and poultry dressing. Lay one slice of the fish in an earthen baking dish, brush generously with butter, over this arrange the bread mixture, add a few drops of hot water if needed to hold the dressing together. Press the other slice of fish on the dressing and dredge lightly with salt, spread bits of butter over the fish, and bake in a moderate oven until the fish separates easily from the bones.

Fig Pudding.—Put one-third of a pound of suet through the meat grinder, work until creamy, then add one-half pound of finely chopped figs. Soak two and one-third cupfuls of bread crumbs in one-half cupful of milk, add two well-beaten eggs, one cupful of sugar and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt. Combine mixtures, turn into a buttered mold and steam three hours. Serve with an egg sauce.

Tempting Foods

WHEN you are tired of squash served in the ordinary way try: Squash Souffle.—Take two cupfuls of mashed cooked squash; add gradually one cupful of cream, and when well-mixed, the yolks of two eggs, well beaten. Mix well, then fold in the whites, beaten stiff; salt and pepper to taste. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Serve at once.

Lettuce With Sherry's Dressing.—Mix three-fourths of a cupful of olive oil with five tablespoonsful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful of chopped red pepper, green pepper and parsley, one teaspoonful of salt, one chopped Bermuda onion and a few dashes of cayenne. Put into a pint mason jar and shake for five minutes. Set on ice and let stand one hour before using. Serve on head lettuce.

Raisin Tapioca Pudding.—Soak one cupful of pearl tapioca overnight in cold water and cook in a double boiler in the morning in a quart of milk, until soft. Remove from the fire and cool slightly, stirring in three tablespoonsful of butter. Heat two cupfuls of milk, and stir in three beaten eggs; add to the warm tapioca, stir in one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of seeded raisins with the grated rind of half a lemon and bake for one hour in a moderate oven, stirring for first half of the cooking until the pudding is all of the same consistency, then allow it to brown on top.

Carrot Pudding.—Take one cupful each of finely minced suet, grated raw potato, grated raw carrot, sugar, seedless raisins and currants. Add allspice to flavor and enough flour to make a soft dough. Place in a buttered pudding dish, then in a steamer and steam two and one-half to three hours. This pudding takes the place of plum pudding. Serve with a rich, hard sauce or an egg sauce.

Housekeeping Hints

THOUGH the house-cleaning time of spring is yet some weeks ahead, it is a good time to look through linen closets, drawers in dressers and chiffoniers, relining the drawers and making an inventory of supplies. It is a wonderful aid to keep an inventory of supplies and where they may be found. In emergency anyone will be able to find them. Make a list of the things that are getting low, so when the opportunity for purchase comes one knows what is really needed.

This is now a good time to make a half-dozen broom heads to use in the cleaning of the walls and floors. These may be made from old outworn flannel nightgowns. Make them six inches longer than the broom with a four-inch ruffle at the bottom, which makes them more effective when brushing down walls and moldings.

If troubled with ants, sprinkle tartar emetic around where they seem to come in. As it is a poison keep it away from pets and food.

Keep a small shallow box or basket lined with newspaper in the kitchen to hold all peelings of vegetables, fruit and egg shells. It is easily wrapped and removed to the garbage pail or incinerator. A paper sack is another good receptacle to hold garbage.

Another large basket to bring up fruit, canned foods and vegetables from the cellar will save many steps. The empty cans may be carried down to the storeroom in the same basket.

While saving the housewife in saving strength if it is used to carry up clothes, books, or anything which must be carried up or down. Putting the things in the basket will often save several trips.

While saving in during the rainy or cold weather is a good time to repair all summer clothing and get ready for the days that may be spent out of doors.

"Mayapple Salad" Was Famous

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mark Lonsdale sat down at the yellow painted table and looked with a bored and weary eye at the flocks of black geese that flew in triangles over the yellow walls. Geese everywhere, all sizes, but always black, either waddled up and down or flew across the walls. "Huntin' here," he grinned to himself as a waitress advanced. He rather expected her to be attired as the famous Goose Girl, and leading a black goose in leash, but she was just a plain everyday little waitress.

Mark studied the menu thoughtfully. He was lunching early, and his appetite was tickled.

"A salad—some tea—and you might bring me some cake."

"What kind of salad?" she asked. "Something good, that's all," and he opened the magazine he had bought.

As he surveyed the delectable luncheon placed before him, Mark felt a pang of homesickness.

"May Apple's" own recipe, he thought, startled out of his weariness; "there's that trick of flavoring that she would never tell a soul. He leaned back in his chair and beckoned to the waitress.

"This salad," he tried to speak carefully, but the matter was of such great importance to him that his voice shook. "This salad is very good."

She beamed upon him. "Yes, sir, it is one of our specialties." "Of course it is made here—at the Black Goose?"

"Yes, sir." "Perhaps it is the manager's own recipe?" he suggested.

"No, sir, we have a very good salad woman," she said primly and moved away. She thought the pale, stern young man was trying to flirt with her.

Mark ate the salad slowly, dwelling painfully on his own romance—a pitiable romance whose aroma was not that of roses or violet, the delicate pungency of a salad. But in the old days they had called it "Mayapple Salad," because May Apple had contrived its peculiar deliciousness.

He had been on the point of asking May Apple to marry him when business suddenly called him to the Far West. From there he had gone to British Columbia, and finally Alaska. He wrote letters to May and never had a reply. His own people wrote that Mr. Apple had suddenly died, the family had scattered, and May and her mother had disappeared.

When Mark came home he went to the Appleby farm and found it in the hands of a stranger. No one knew where May and her mother were at present, but they had "gone to the city," and as the city happened to be a very large one, Mark was still going through the needle-and-haystack experience.

He tasted the salad came to an end and a delicious chocolate layer cake was set before him.

"What is the name of the salad I have just eaten?" he asked. She referred to the menu. "That is mayapple salad," she said, and hurried away.

Mark went out of the place in a daze. Somebody was making May's own particular salad, and he was a poor sleuth if he could not discover his love's whereabouts through the medium of that delectable dish. He knew that in the busy tea shop there was a chance of obtaining such information, but he did not have the telephone in a nearby drug store.

"I am so sorry," trilled a sweet voice, "but Miss Appleby went home at eleven o'clock. Her home address? A sudden creaking of the sweetness, 'I am very sorry, but I cannot help it.'"

"She will come tomorrow morning," argued Mark doggedly, "and I will take my early stand in this drug store window even if I have to pay a rental for it—and I will wait until she does come!" Having made this decision, Mark went to the drug store, and he waited until he was fully well for a harassed man. At seven o'clock the next morning he took his stand on the corner near the drug store, which did not open until eight. In the drug store it is a matter of history that he waited two mortal hours before he recognized a certain slim, erect form come swinging around the corner. His dash from the store was in record time, and he managed to catch up to May Appleby in front of the tea shop. The basket she carried was empty.

"Mark Lonsdale!" gasped Miss Appleby. "Why—Mark, you're upset my salad forever!" She bent over him as he picked up the basket and found the well-packed salad quite unharmed.

"May, do you love me?" he asked, desperately, after she had hurriedly explained her mother's mortified pride at their fallen fortunes had compelled their hiding themselves for awhile. "May, do you love me as much as I love you?"

"To ask such a question at such a time? Well, if you insist, Mark, she lowered her voice to a whisper and blushed rosily. "I don't know how much you care—but I do!"

If it had not been for the crowds on the sidewalk and the curious eyes looking from the tea shop, Mark would have embraced her then and there. "I will not kiss you now," he threatened, "if you will promise never to make mayapple salad for anyone except me!"

Pig Family Name

"Brother Bacon," commenced Daddy, "who was a grandson of Porky Pig, decided that he would like to have a party."

"He is right," said Miss Ham. "We should let the whole world know that we are fond of ourselves."

"They've always known that," said Mrs. Duck, who had waddled into the barnyard to hear the talk, "because they have called you pigs. 'We were called pigs long before they used the name to mean someone selfish,' said Grandfather Porky."

"Maybe so," said Mrs. Duck. "I can't remember so far back. As long as I have known the barnyard you have always been called by the family name of pig. And as long as I can remember, all selfish, greedy people were called pigs."

"We got the name first," said Miss Ham, squealing angrily. "It's a good old family name, and we've never changed it."

"But how could selfish people ever have been called pigs if your family was, way back, had not been greedy?" asked Mrs. Duck. "To be sure, you must have been given the name first in order that selfish creatures ever after could be called after you."

"You talk absurdly," said Miss Ham.

"Absurdly, grunt, grunt," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Ridiculously, grunt, grunt," said Sammy Sausage.

"Senselessly, squeal, squeal," said Master Pink Pig.

"Senselessly, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig.

"Senselessly, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig's mother, and Master Pink Pig's mother said the same.

"Mrs. Pink Pig and Mrs. Pinky Pig, wives of Master Pink Pig and Pinky Pig agreed with the others, too."

"So did Sir Benjamin Bacon and Sir Percival Pork."

"Little Black Squealer agreed with the others, too."

"They all agreed that Mrs. Duck had talked absurdly, and as she stood by them they all squealed and grunted and twisted their funny little tails and said over and over again:

"That Shows How Little You Know, Pinky Pig."

"Simply absurd the way you talk, Mrs. Duck."

"It's not absurd at all, quack, quack," said Mrs. Duck.

"Your family name is not a name of which to be proud. In fact, it means the same as ashamed, yes, I'd be terribly, horribly, wretchedly mortified."

"I don't know what I would do about it."

"I am indeed thankful that we have no name like that of Pig."

"You, what have you, pigs, means the same as ashamed, yes, I'd be terribly, horribly, wretchedly mortified."

"Thankful I am that I wasn't given such a greedy family name."

"Well," said Pinky Pig, "it's more of an honor than was ever paid you, Mrs. Duck."

"People are never called ducks. You're not even selfish ducks, you are simply of no account at all."

"No one could be named after you. You aren't of enough consequence."

"Quacked," quacked Mrs. Duck. "That shows how little you know, Pinky Pig."

"When things are lovely and when children are kind and nice you will often hear it said, 'Oh, isn't she a perfect duck!'"

"The pigs all walked away toward the mud in the pen. They had remembered hearing something about ducks that was nice, but they didn't want to tell Mrs. Duck so."

"Good-day," quacked Mrs. Duck, as she grinned. "Of course they had to be going," she said to herself. "They knew they were in the wrong, but they couldn't bear to admit it."

"She walked back to the duck pond to tell the others all about it, and the pigs went back to the pen. Brother Bacon had his party in which all the pigs joined, for they thought they needed a good meal and some comfort after such an extremely disagreeable talk."

A Good Bag

The old country mansion had been turned into a clubhouse and the surrounding silver park into a golf course. The members were extraordinarily proud of the luxurious club with the previous owner's hunting trophies still adorning the walls.

One day a player was showing a visitor around the place.

"I should like to see the stranger, as he stepped into the oak-paneled hall. He waved his hand in the direction of the mounted heads of stags, caribou and moose. "Tell me, did they kill all these fellows with golf balls?"

THROUGHOUT Europe the American tourist is interested in what in America would be called arches of triumph, great monuments to great victories.

In Paris, for example, there is the famous Arc de Triomphe du Carrousel, once the main entrance to the court of the Tuilleries, which was erected by Fontaine and Percier, in memory of the victories won by Napoleon I. over the Austrians in 1805.

This famous arch is a reduced imitation of the Arch of Septimius Severus at Rome, and is 48 feet in height.

The Place du Carrousel was so named from a kind of tournament—tilting at rings and Moors' heads—given there by Louis XIV.

Hard to Fit

A city man, driving his automobile along a little-used country road, heard something rattle beneath his car, stopped, looked back and saw a bright metal object lying in the road a short distance behind. It was a pinpoint, evidently lost by some farmer.

It was fully half an hour before the next car came along, and its occupant, seeing the first man flat on his back under his vehicle by the roadside, stopped and asked what the trouble was.

The city man emerged and held up the pinpoint.

"This blooming thing dropped off my car," he said, "and I've been hunting for half an hour to find out where it belongs."—Exchange.

Chinese Societies

Chinese tongs are organizations, with an element of secrecy, of groups of Chinese for mutual protection and assistance. Basically, they are of a commercial character, the members being engaged in business, and they are thus rival trade associations. This rivalry occasionally breaks out into open warfare when aggressions by one tong against another, consisting of unfair commercial practices, boycotts, etc., give the rival tong cause for offense. The tongs in the United States are branches of wider organizations, having their main headquarters in Shanghai and Peking, China, and branches exist in other nations besides the United States.

"Hard" and "Soft" Water

Hard water is water which contains dissolved in it certain substances which interfere with the action of soap by forming with it an insoluble compound or curd. The hardness of natural waters is principally due to the salts of calcium and magnesium, especially calcium carbonate, which produces temporary hardness, removable by boiling, and calcium sulphate, which causes permanent hardness. Soft water is characterized by the pleasant absence of substances which prevent the formation of lather with soaps.

Swing Plays Part in Hindu Religious Rites

One often finds in the near vicinity of a Hindu temple, says a writer in an Indian paper, two high stone pillars, sometimes 30 feet high, with a stone crosspiece, from which hang iron chains. These swings play an important part in the various festivals of the year, especially for the young people.

The very act of swinging on this sacred structure is pleasing to the deity of the temple, and when people come to combine both pleasure and worship, then it is not unnatural this form of exercise should be greatly appreciated. In certain seasons, especially the harvest season, the swing is in great demand, and religious ceremonies are performed by the priests of the temple. On the top bar of the swing it is not unusual to find a number of earthenware chatters, which are the home of the sacred pigeons connected with the temple.

These swings are often built in the middle of the street, and they not infrequently constitute a real obstacle to traffic. But the authorities would certainly have great difficulty in persuading the temple people to agree to the removal of them.

LEWISTON MAN GAINS 31 POUNDS ON KARNAK

Edward N. Hutchins Is Restored To His Old Time Health By This Sensational New Medicine.

KARNAK HELPED HIM FROM FIRST DOSE
Seventeen Years of Intense Stomach Suffering Had Made His Case Seem Hopeless, He Says.

It is not what the manufacturers claim for it but the testimony of the multiplied thousands who have benefited by it that has made Karnak the most famous medicine in the world today. Among the latest to testify is Mr. Edward N. Hutchins, 46 Canal Street, Lewiston, Me., who says:

"When I tell you that I have actually gone up from one hundred and forty-nine pounds to one hundred and eighty pounds in weight and have recovered my old-time health by the use of Karnak you can understand why I am so strong for this new medicine. My stomach has been in a wretched condition for a great many years. In 1907 I had a tape worm removed from my stomach, but they failed to get the head, and it had to be done again in 1923. Well, sir, before I got Karnak I was in such a rundown condition that I just felt dead on my feet, and had about made up my mind there wasn't anything that could help me. Food seemed to ferment the time it reached my stomach, and I had terrible headaches and bloated as tight as a drum with gas. Well, sir, I kept on going down hill and losing weight until I was about the most discouraged person you ever saw.

"It seemed that Karnak was made just for my case by the remarkable way in which it got to the roots of my troubles and built me up again. The very first dose had a something effect on my stomach, and twelve bottles have built me up thirty-one pounds and made a new man of me. Karnak is the best medicine ever put in a bottle and words can't express my thankfulness toward it."

Try Karnak yourself! And remember—Karnak Pills are an essential and vitally important part of the Karnak treatment, especially if constipated.

Karnak is sold in Rockland exclusively by the Corner Drug Store; in Thomaston by McDonald's Loxley Store; in Union by Gordon-Lovejoy Co.; and by the leading druggist in every city—adv.

"Boys should never lose touch with the field and the stream and the mountains, the open spaces and the fresh air. That love will be a precious possession as your years lengthen out. There is no life in the soil for every man. There is healing in the trees for tired minds, and for our overburdened spirits there is strength in the hills if only we will lift up our eyes."—Calvin Coolidge.

The environment of the country leads to much happiness and that is the real essence of life. Is it not? Happiness comes largely from making others happy; bringing cheer into other lives is the most fruitful source of satisfaction in life.

To be happy and make others happy one must be busy and teach others to be busy.

In Worse Shape.
The most unhappy, discontented, constantly shedding dislike on all others are the persons who believe to do but to amuse themselves. To live a selfish life that benefits no one, not even themselves. They are wasters, wasting their own time and that of others who come in contact with them. While constantly hunting pleasure they never find it.

"The boy or girl born in the country is a child who is fond of birds, animals, bees, flowers, trees, open air and the sun."

"One of the Woodbury girls begins her letter with the sentence, 'I like the farm because there are lots of animals to play with.' The other Woodbury girl says: 'I like the farm because there is a red and white tested cow to give milk and also a little black pony and a white horse.'"

It is neither surprising nor a new discovery that young people on farms love to be healthy and tender in the arms of their parents. They should have been and always will be. Children are electrically alive. They react to the crave for affection with animals that act naturally, playfully, intelligently and do not seel, frown and voice "don't's."

Young people are full to overflowing of affection which ought to have worthy objects upon which to lavish it. Between children and their animal pets a cultured reciprocity exists. The affection and tenderness in the emotions of young. The foundation of a lifelong attitude of kindness and mercy toward animals is laid during those early years when young people see and pet farm animals. People who are kind to animals are likely to be kind to one another.

Good citizenship, therefore, grows healthily out of contacts of the part of the young folk with domestic animals. Parents who share this view with us will see to it that their children enjoy worthy animal associates. Among the ties that bind young people to the farms worthy of their devotion, the strongest and the longest remembered are their animal friends.

Builds for Parenthood.
Loving and caring for the animals on and around the farm make far better fatherhood and motherhood, better citizens loving their stock, their children, their neighbors, their state and their country.

Love grows as it feeds, and so long as it is without one self there cannot be too much of it. It is only when it is all within that we see it go all wrong, when self is all that is loved, then the life is narrow, selfish, and without satisfaction.

Such lives may acquire large properties for their subjugate all thoughts, inspirations, inclinations, toward their families and neighbors for the sake of getting money, no matter how, but getting it, and that spirit is rocking, our lives today.

You of the future, you men and women of tomorrow, make your way along toward the open spaces where "Nature exists unblemished, for the future is dependent upon such settings to develop wonderful possibilities of this country."

NEW PRESIDENT SETS HIGH MARK FOR TRAVELERS AID

ADOPTION of the new insignia and the election of a new President are 1925 indications of a great movement now under way to organize Travelers Aid service in every town of over 10,000 or 15,000 population in the United States.

Marcus L. Bell of New York, General Counsel and Vice-President of the Rock Island Railroad, has accepted the presidency of the National Association of Travelers Aid Societies, with the avowed aim of making Travelers Aid one of the foremost social agencies of America.

"Local Travelers Aid Societies have been built up slowly through the years in many cities. The foundations laid are now broad and deep and the time has come for a rapid expansion," says Mr. Bell.

"American railroads carried a billion passengers in one year in 15 million trains. Other millions go and come in steamships and still other millions in motor cars."

"With the hundreds of thousands of sophisticated and well-to-do travelers, go many hundreds who, through youthful ignorance, mental incapacity, poverty, illness or misfortune, encounter hazards in strange surroundings and frequently constitute unwelcome additions to communities to which they wander."

"Boys run away on adventure intent; girls are off bravely with ill-formed plans; mischances happen to everybody; aged people become confused; mentally incompetent persons wander helplessly; non-English speaking immigrants are lost. To all these comes assistance from the Travelers Aid."

"The streams of travel flow along transportation lines and on these lines lie cities like catch basins, each taking its quota of travelers in need. In making adequate provisions to protect and aid the traveler in difficulty, communities must act for self-protection, if for no other reason."

"Travelers Aid Societies are at work in 167 cities, knit loosely through a national association. Last year this inter-city chain of service, with its 519 workers, gave some form of definite, practical service to over two million passengers."

"So plain and definite is the need for the kind of service given by Travelers Aid that there has been a remarkable growth in its work in the past five years. The time can be foreseen clearly when every American community of over 15,000 population will have at least one trained and competent Travelers Aid worker at its railroad station."

TENANT'S HARBOR

Next Friday evening the regular meeting of O. E. S. will be held. A large attendance is desired. The committee on entertainment and refreshments are Ethel Auld, Gilbert Auld and Granville Bacheider.

The High School senior class held a social Friday evening. About $11 was cleared from sale of ice cream and candy.

Dr. and Mrs. Leach and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Rawley motored to Rockland Saturday.

The ladies class of the Sunday school met with Mrs. Alice Murphy last Friday evening and elected these officers: Mrs. Murphy, president; Ethel Auld, vice president; Mabel Wilson, secretary; Ella Pease, treasurer; Alice Wheeler, Mabel Barter and Fannie Morris, Visiting committee. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Murphy.

Seven of our young men took a hike to Rockland last Saturday. They went to three moving pictures, had three good meals and arrived home about midnight. They were George Dunn, Arthur Thompson, Theodore Stimpson, Charles Morris, Russell Monaghan, Cecil Morris and Howard Monaghan.

Capt. and Mrs. Orris Holbrook and Mrs. E. E. Allen motored to Rockland Saturday.

Mr. Scott, one of the town's elderly residents, while walking on salt water ice last week broke through and, save for the timely assistance of some of the men of the village, would have been drowned. He was in the icy water about a half hour.

Puritan Hebeah Lodge will hold its installation Thursday evening. Each member is requested to take either pie or cake. The committee for the supper includes: A. J. Rawley, Clarence Dwyer and William Cook.

Warrington Gilchrist and Charles Bequest were in Rockland Saturday. Sylvanus McKenzie is working for Darus Cook.

Mrs. Robert Wood was operated upon at Sibsey Hospital Thursday. Arthur Brown of New York is having a well drilled at his summer home here.

Those attending the Baptist church in this village should be pleased at the results of the past two years, especially in a financial way. The pastor, Rev. Perley Miller, informs the writer that during his ministry here, in about two and one-half years, the church has raised over $5000; that there has been more given to missions than in any previous year in the history of the church; that at the beginning of the year the treasurer reported all bills paid, with no soliciting and $281 remaining in the treasury. During this time the ladies sewing circle has raised about $1500. At the August fair last year $491.02 was cleared and at the December fair $154.46. The choir and orchestra still work with the same interest as last year.

Gilbert Auld has served as choir leader. As his friends and associates appreciated his services, and also that of Mrs. Auld in assisting him, they desired to show their appreciation by making them a present. Mr. Auld's birthday was Jan. 25. He has been heard to wish that he could have a birthday party, so it was planned to give him a surprise at the church vestry. A choir rehearsal was appointed for the evening of Jan. 25. That Friday was a bitter cold day. Mr. Auld went around the village and tried to postpone the rehearsal, but the choir members declined, so the rehearsal was in progress when about 50 persons entered. Mr. Auld was "dressed for the occasion" in overalls, jumper, felt and rubbers. Anybody could see it was a complete surprise. It was some time before either he or Mrs. Auld "came to" and then only when Mr. Miller asked them to occupy two very pretty rocking chairs and presented them with a picture, all of which had been purchased for them. The gifts were accepted with high appreciative manner and Mr. Auld made some very pleasing remarks in expressing his thanks. Music, games and refreshments were enjoyed and everyone wished Mr. Auld many more happy birthdays. It was regretted that some of those who gave liberally and were much interested in the affair could not be present.

SOUTH BELFAST
There was no school Thursday on account of bad travelling. Frank Hall is wiring Joel Prescott's house for electric lights.

The box social that was planned for Saturday night is postponed indefinitely.

Dwight Keller, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy W. Herrick, entertained a few friends Saturday in honor of his ninth birthday. Ice cream, cake and candy were served. The table was prettily decorated with valentines and red hearts with valentines as favors. The guests were Alice Prescott, Robert Sellers, Grace, Alfred and Ralph Thomas, Millie, Edith and Henry Elwell, Leona and Hazel Herrick.

Miss Ruth Wright of Belfast formerly of South Belfast was given a surprise party at Miss Thelma Nickols' in honor of her 16th birthday. The guests were Miss Elizabeth Newell, Miss Alice Banks, Miss Bernice Armstrong, Miss Julia Chalmers, Mark Shibles, Clayton Higgins and Linwood Nichols.

Celebrating St. Valentine

The first real gala occasion held in the Andrews Gymnasium was a Valentine masquerade party on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association. It is a well-known fact that when Mrs. Mary Bunker, Mrs. Ruby Peabody, Mrs. John Creighton, Miss Mary McPhail or Miss Margaret Jordan sponsor an affair success is assured, but when all those ladies combine to give a thoroughly charming party for the young people, the result is little short of perfection. Valentine decorations, the Snappy Five orchestra led by Douglas Vinal, flower favors, colored streamers thrown from the galleries, confetti and balloons weighted with balloons kept movement at its height all the evening, both for the dancers and the numerous spectators in the balconies.

Of course the most important event was the judging of the costumes for prizes; and the committee of judges—Miss Margaret Ruggles, Mrs. J. H. Flanagan of Rockland, Mrs. Olive Sturtevant, Arthur Elliot and J. Walter Stout had a hard task before them. Numerous masculine and feminine costumes ranged from Spain to the woolly West and from the days of long ago to extreme modernity, with the preponderance of costumes in honor of good St. Valentine. After mature deliberation the worthy judges awarded prizes as follows: To Miss Alice Peabody, for her Valentine costume of swishing hearts; to Edgar Ames,

JACK HOXIE in "BARBED WIRE"

Hoxie fans are due for a real surprise this week when they see their idol, who has in the past been looked upon as a "two-fisted man" or a "gun toting cow puncher," without his trusty six-shooter at his hip. True, the gun plays a big part in this production and nearly gets him in serious trouble, but Jack himself does not carry it in a single scene—he uses his fists in true he-man fashion.

sleeve-links for his Spanish costume, to Miss Charlotte Cross, a fan in recognition of her most amusing array; and to Master Tom Scott as the Black Cat, a collar pin.

Many others richly deserved honorable mention, but it should be said to Master Kenneth Feyer that, as a strange young lady in evening costume of black and red, and with no other facial disguise than horn-rimmed glasses, he deceived not only the judges, but his schoolmates as well. In fact, it is said that the boys were considerably exercised over the unknown fair one. Ice cream was served at intermission and the merry party broke up at 11:45.

CAMDEN

Mrs. Mabel Whyte and Mrs. Florence Curtis entertained at dinner and auction Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Curtis. Decorations and favors were appropriate to St. Valentine. There were three tables in play, and one of the guests well known to hold poor cards, tested out the mythical good luck of a rabbit's foot, but her only good luck was winning the prize for putting a puzzle together in record time. Allen's Lung
Healer

Restored Him To Health and To His School

From all indications this boy was on the verge of consumption, yet his case was not so hopeless as it seemed, for he found and used the right remedy in time. Cases similar to this are a common occurrence, as Allen's Lung Healer is becoming famous as a lung medicine.

H. J. Allen, Dear Sir:—Four years ago, while in my senior year in the high school, I was suffering from a severe cough on my lungs. I had been doctoring for several months but had found nothing to help me. My lungs became so sore that at times it seemed as though they were billeted. I became so run down that I had to leave school. Then a friend told me of your Lung Healer. I tried it and was greatly relieved by my first bottle. I continued to use it and after taking four bottles my cough was gone and my health was completely restored. It made a new man of me and I went back to school. Your Lung Healer is certainly a grand medicine and a great body builder. Yours gratefully,

JOHN HENRY PERRY,

Once Populous Cities
Reclaimed by Jungle

The old question whether a thing can be lost when you know where it is applies in part to lost cities, because the sites of many of them are known and in some cases even the buildings and statuary are almost intact.

Now, however, their only inhabitants are the beasts of the jungle, lions prowl through their echoing halls, monkeys race across their fretted arches and snakes lurk in their dark dungeons or glide across their crumbling pavements.

For instance, the holy city of the Buddhists—Harabodder, in Java—had been forgotten for 600 years when Sir Stamford Raffles rediscovered it and its wonder temple, the eighth wonder of the world, says a writer in London Answers.

The jungle of Siam has hidden its ancient capital, Ayuthia, for four centuries. Its inhabitants fled before the conquering Burmese, and never returned. It is now said to be the lurking place of thousands of enormous snakes.

Mystery surrounds the dead city of Tibet, which Captain Tenzig discovered. It is a vast collection of palaces, monasteries and dwelling houses, but the Tibetans professed ignorance of its existence, and also of the reason of its abandonment.

Five centuries ago Angkor had a population of three-quarters of a million. Today it is the dead city of Cambodia. The carved stone elephants, the immense causeways, the majestic temples, still remain, but the jungle has invaded the streets and squares.

Young Ducklings Early at Home in the Water

The woodcock, unlike most other ducks, usually builds his nest far from his natural element, water. writes Ellis Gilmore MacLeod in St. Nicholas. But no sooner are the eggs hatched and the ducklings about the size of humbees, than each parent bird takes a little one in its bill, wriggles through the opening in the chestnut tree or white oak which harbors the nest, and with a quick glance lest some enemy may lurk near, flies swiftly overland to creek or water hole. Here the two tiny burdens are dropped gently into the water.

Without previous swimming lessons, these newly hatched little ones dart over the surface of the water for the cover of marsh grass or lily pad where they hide until the return of their parents with more of their brethren and sisters.

The flight of the old ducks continues back and forth from the home nest to the water until the family of from 12 to 18 are assembled, when, at a soft call-note from the parents, every little paddler darts from cover and starts chasing water spiders, as if that were an old game.

His Way Out of Dilemma

The commanding officer looked down the charge sheet to see what type of case he had to deal with that morning.

"Mutiny!" he muttered. "Private King charged with mutiny!" Then aloud: "Where is the corporal who made this arrest?"

"Here, sir," answered a corporal, stepping forward.

"You charge Private King with mutiny?" he asked in stern inquiry.

"I do sir," was the reply.

"On what grounds?"

The corporal hesitated for a moment. Then:

"Well, sir," he said, confidentially, "It was really insubordination, but I didn't know how to spell that, so I put 'mutiny.'"

Are the stables kept clean—especially during the months you keep the milk cows in?

Clean stables and good ventilation are essential if the cow is to give full returns. Clean gutters, clean bedding and lots of pure air are important.

Has your milk herd access to all the fresh water they will drink? If not, give it to them. Water is cheap, and they will pay you with more and better milk.

Do you keep the cows clean? Filth adhering to flanks and udders takes money right out of your pocket. Impurities are absorbed into the system. That means more feed or less milk. Milk from a manure-caked cow is unclean and, on a strict interpretation, against the law. In just a few minutes, you can clip the udders, flanks and underlines of the cows. Thereafter, it is only a matter of seconds to wipe off all clinging foreign matter with a damp cloth. Farmers and dairymen who follow this practice say it increases milk flow and enriches the milk. And the cow is more comfortable and contented.

Are you giving your cows a square deal?

Giving the Dairy Cow a Square Deal
News Bureau of Animal Husbandry

A scene on a scientifically conducted milking dairy farm. (Inset) Five quality calves on knees of cow kept in properly tended stable.

There are now 25,375,000 dairy cattle in the United States. Of these, says a recent report, only about one-half are cared for in a manner to enable them to return a fair profit to their owners.

Many a milk cow has been accused of being a "boarder" when the owner had only himself to blame. Her two tiny burdens are dropped gently into the water.

Without previous swimming lessons, these newly hatched little ones dart over the surface of the water for the cover of marsh grass or lily pad where they hide until the return of their parents with more of their brethren and sisters.

That Seems To Be Point At Issue In Waldoboro Teacher Case.

A mandamus hearing was held Thursday before Active Retire Justice Albert M. Spear in the case of Agnes Creamer vs. the superintendent of schools and the school board of the town of Waldoboro. In this case the plaintiff alleges that she was hired to teach for the year in one of the schools of Waldoboro and that at the end of the fall term, without any notice or hearing as required by statute, she was discharged. She asks that she be restored to her school.

The defendants claim that she was hired for the term and that therefore when the term expired she was through as far as her employment in that school was concerned. The question at issue is whether she was employed by the year, as she contends, or if she was employed for the one term, as the defendants declare. Several witnesses were heard in the case but the lawyers did not argue. They will present briefs and Justice Spear will then consider the matter.

IN THE YOSEMITE

Ex-Mayor Brown Was Awestricken — Also Entertained By Tom Mix.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—Many miles have I traveled nature's wonders to see, but most beautiful of all is the Yosemite.

The Yosemite National Park cannot be pictured or described; it must be seen in order to fully appreciate it in all its grandeur, its big proportions, its natural beauty.

Our hotel is hemmed in on all sides by mountains thousands of feet high, and affords a most excellent view of the famous Yosemite Falls only a few minutes walk from the hotel. The water drops over a precipice nearly 3,000 feet high to the basin below, and our trip to the foot of the falls was very interesting. The tops of the mountains are covered with snow at the present time.

Few tourists are here at this season but the hotel lobby is quite a gay place in the evening as Tom Mix and company are here "shooting" for a picture adapted from a Zane Grey story called "The Hainbow Trail." Last evening Tom Mix entertained us by relating stories of miraculous escapes from serious accident or death while performing before the camera-man. Realism means more to him than the street appearance of his company, and in the hotel lobby he brushes elbows with the real characters of the west—miners with full beards, cowboys and real Indians. Wigs and false whiskers find little favor with Tom Mix.

Weather conditions are not as good as usual, but we are not complaining. Our first rain was at the Big Trees, a real downpour I can assure you.

We pack our grips and move on to Oakland tomorrow, from which city we start our homeward journey.

Count the Smiles

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

It matters not how many years
Of life I chance to see;
It matters not what unknown fate
The future holds for me—
It matters not, if every day
I find some task to do
That sows the seeds of happiness
Where pain or heartache grew.

We should not measure life alone
By checking off the miles,
But while we live our little day
Let's count the friendly smiles
That mark our path, and let's be so
Considerate and kind
That love will shed its radiance
On those we leave behind.

NOTED STARS IN IT

Lou Tellenen and Pauline Frederick Featured Players in "Let Not Man Put Asunder."

There is one problem that has confronted humanity from the beginning of the human race, a subject treated in the Bible and civil law, and one to which there seems no satisfactory solution. Although the Bible states, "Let Not Man Put Asunder," and civil law decides for certain causes a separation may be granted, Basil King whose novel has been pictured by the Strand Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, is of the opinion that those whom God hath joined cannot be put asunder.

The story is a daring expose of the divorce evil from several angles and furnishes the plot for an intensely interesting, dramatic photoplay. It is one of those productions that gets under the skin and furnishes food for thought; one of the few pictures worth talking about and recommending to a friend. "Let Not Man Put Asunder," impresses each spectator in a different manner, according to the individual ideas and ideals; for there is no preachment in the picture. It is the inner tale of six lives or three couples who seek to end their troubles in the divorce courts. The separation they receive by law does not break the bond which was made in heaven and happiness is not found in separate paths.

Around these lives a net of circumstances and conditions is woven as only the hand of a master writer can weave the threads of fiction into a convincing fabric. In the background are magnificent sets, operatic, realistic and spectacular entertainments and gorgeous gowns. These done make the production worth seeing; but when to these are added a masterly by Lou Tellenen and Pauline Frederick; the direction of J. Stuart Blackton and a dramatic story the resultant picture stands out as a sparkling gem from a platinum setting—adv.

Frank Meserve was the prize-winner of the evening. The winner furnishes the prize for the champion of the next meeting.

STRAND THEATRE

Said to be one of the most elaborate productions of the year, "So This is Marriage," Hobart Henley's Metro-Goldwyn picture, is having its final showings today. A sort of movie microscope, showing that the home of today is influenced by the same set of conditions that sprang up for young couples even in the days of the ancients. The central feminine role, that of a flapper who remains still a flapper after the wedding, is played by Eleanor Boardman, who has lately risen to stellar heights in filmland. Conrad Nagel appears as the young husband, a part of much delicate humor and character strength. Lew Cody, the dangerous Dan McGrew in the recent film version, dons dress clothes in this picture to be the suave romantic figure who appeals when one's husband bores.

"Let Not Man Put Asunder," adapted from Basil King's famous novel of the same name, will be the attraction Wednesday and Thursday. This is the most sensational, emotional exposition of the pitfalls of marriage and divorce that ever has been presented on the screen. The theme of love misguided provides one of the most gripping, human heart-touching stories ever offered motion picture lovers. It is a ringing indictment of divorce, a stirring appeal to men and women who contemplate marriage, and those who are married, to abandon the follies of modern life wherein lies the peril of discontent. It is a picture of beauty; the sets are lavish and there is an atmosphere of luxury that places the picture far in advance of any recently shown here. It breathes wealth and society, yet possesses the element of greatness in drama, human characters who live and suffer and are regenerated through the supreme sacrifice. Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellenen, two of the greatest emotional players on the screen, have the leading roles.—adv.

PARK THEATRE

Does Tom "come through" in "Coming Through?"

"Come Through" is a Thomas Morgan's latest production for Park. The story is a picture version of "Red Rock," a mining novel by Jack Deetha.

Lila Lee, in her first screen role in more than a year, is featured at the head of a strong supporting cast.

William Bercy gives one of his greatest characterizations as a roughneck mine foreman. Others in the cast are Jack Milburn as a multimillionaire steel magnate, Laurence Wheat and Frank Champagne.

"Classmates" Richard Barthelmess' new First National picture, which comes to the Park Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, centers some of its picture-que action about that famous path of romance, "Filtration Walk" at West Point.

"Filtration Walk" has been painted many times in story and poetry. It is a little narrow, winding walk, leading through the trees, down the steep cliff of West Point for a distance of some three-quarters of a mile to the Hudson river below.

The path leads past the site of the old battery, built in 1778, at one end of the immense chain, which was stretched across the Hudson to Constitution Island, then fortified. The chain was designed to prevent the passage of British war frigates along the river. The romantic love story of "Classmates" moves along this famous path of romance.

"Filtration Walk" for it is here that Damon Irving, played by Mr. Barthelmess, tells Sylvia Randolph, portrayed by pretty Madge Evans, that he loves her.—adv.

EMPIRE THEATRE

Laughter prevailed at the Empire last night when the newest of Mack Sennett's imitable productions, "The Extra Girl," with Mabel Normand as the star, made its first local appearance. There isn't the slightest doubt that this clever comedy, one of the best things the popular Mabel has appeared in as the patrons enjoyed it immensely.

A double feature program will prevail at the Empire on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. "The Chorus Lady," with Margaret Livingston, is an adaptation of James Forbes' play of that name in which Rex Stahl scored such a sensational success some years ago. "I Am The Man," with Lionel Barrymore, is considered a mighty fine picture and one that you cannot afford to miss.—adv.
